- Spleen et Idéal
- Le Vin
- Les Fleurs du Mal
- La Révolte
- La Mort
- Les Épaves

Each section explores a different aspect of the human condition. The first section, Spleen et Idéal, deals with the poet's feelings of boredom and despair. The second section, Le Vin, celebrates the pleasures of wine and other intoxicants. The third section, Les Fleurs du Mal, explores the darker side of love and beauty. The fourth section, La Révolte, expresses the poet's anger and rebellion against society. The fifth section, La Mort, confronts the inevitability of death. The sixth section, Les Épaves, collects poems that did not fit into the other sections.

Les Fleurs du Mal was a controversial work when it was first published. Baudelaire was accused of immorality and blasphemy. However, the poems have since come to be recognized as a masterpiece of French literature. They have been praised for their originality, beauty, and power.
