The African Union (AU) is a continental body consisting of the 55 member states that make up the countries of the African continent. It was established on 26 May 2001 in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. The AU is the successor to the Organisation of African Unity (OAU), which was established in 1963.

The AU's mission is to promote unity, solidarity, cooperation and development in Africa. It has a wide range of objectives, including:

- To achieve greater unity and solidarity among African countries and peoples
- To defend the sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence of its member states
- To promote peace, security and stability on the continent
- To promote sustainable economic development and social progress in Africa
- To promote democracy, good governance and human rights in Africa

The AU has made significant progress in achieving its objectives. It has played a key role in resolving conflicts in Africa, such as the civil war in Sudan and the conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo. The AU has also been instrumental in promoting economic development in Africa, through initiatives such as the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD).
