Here is a sneak peek of The Era of Flood:

The rain had been falling for days, and it showed no signs of stopping. The streets were flooded, and the rivers were overflowing their banks. The city was in chaos.

A group of survivors huddled together in a small apartment building, trying to stay dry and warm. They had lost everything in the flood, and they were unsure of what the future held.

"I don't know what we're going to do," said one of the survivors. "We've lost everything."

"We have to keep moving," said another. "We have to find a safe place to stay."

The survivors knew that they couldn't stay in the apartment building forever. The water was rising, and it was only a matter of time before the building collapsed.

They gathered their few belongings and headed out into the rain. They didn't know where they were going, but they knew that they had to keep moving.

The survivors walked for hours, through the flooded streets and the ravaged countryside. They were tired, hungry, and cold. But they kept moving.

Finally, they came to a small town that had been spared from the worst of the flooding. The survivors were relieved to find shelter, and they were grateful for the food and water that the townspeople gave them.

The survivors stayed in the town for a few days, resting and recovering from their ordeal. But they knew that they couldn't stay there forever.

They had to keep moving, to find a new home, a new life.
