Glasser's philosophy is rooted in the belief that students are naturally curious and have an innate desire to learn. His approach emphasizes the importance of creating a classroom environment where students feel safe, respected, and responsible for their own actions. By fostering a sense of community and belonging, Glasser believed that teachers could unlock students' potential and inspire them to achieve their full potential.

Key Principles of Quality School Teacher

- Build relationships: Glasser emphasized the importance of establishing strong relationships with students, based on trust, respect, and open communication. By getting to know their students on a personal level, teachers can create a more positive and supportive learning environment.
- Focus on intrinsic motivation: Glasser believed that students are more likely to be engaged and motivated when they feel a sense of purpose and connection to their learning. He encouraged teachers to design lessons that are relevant to students' lives and interests, and to provide opportunities for students to make choices and take ownership of their learning.
- Create a positive classroom culture: A positive classroom culture is one where students feel safe, respected, and valued. Glasser believed that teachers play a crucial role in creating this type of environment by setting clear expectations, providing positive feedback, and encouraging students to support each other.
- Empower students: Glasser believed that students should be given opportunities to take ownership of their learning. He encouraged teachers to involve students in setting goals, making decisions, and assessing their own progress. By empowering students, teachers can help them develop a sense of responsibility and self-efficacy.
