What is Matched Betting?

Matched betting is a form of arbitrage betting that involves placing two bets on the same event, one at a traditional bookmaker and one at a betting exchange. The odds of the two bets are matched so that, regardless of the outcome of the event, you will make a profit.

For example, let's say you find a free bet offer for $10 at Bet365. You could place a $10 bet on Manchester United to win at 2.0 odds. You would then use a betting exchange, such as Betfair, to place a lay bet on Manchester United to win at 2.1 odds. This means that you would be betting $10 that Manchester United will win and $10.50 (10×2.1) that they will not win.

Regardless of whether Manchester United wins or loses, you will make a profit of $0.50. This is because you will win $20 from Bet365 if Manchester United wins, and you will lose $10.50 to Betfair if Manchester United loses. In either case, your net profit is $0.50.

How to Get Started with Matched Betting

Getting started with matched betting is easy. All you need is a computer or smartphone, an internet connection, and a few minutes of your time.

The first step is to sign up for a few online sportsbooks and betting exchanges. Once you have created accounts, you can start looking for free bet offers.

There are many different websites and forums that list free bet offers. Once you have found an offer that you like, simply follow the instructions on how to claim it.

Once you have claimed your free bet, you can use the matched betting calculator on our website to calculate how much to bet at the sportsbook and the betting exchange. Simply enter the free bet amount, the odds of the selection, and the commission rate of the betting exchange. The calculator will then tell you how much to bet on each side.

Once you have placed your bets, you can sit back and relax. Regardless of the outcome of the event, you will make a profit.
